"I AM THE WOMAN"

Mrs. Margaret E. Pell, right, as she exhibited her profile on the stand to prove to jurors that she could be mistaken for Mrs. Ellen Elwood Stokes, left.

With these words Mrs. Margaret E. Pell, scored the greatest triumph yet in the trial of Mrs. Ellen Elwood Stokes in the Stokes case.

Stokes witnesses had lain before the jury hearing the divorce action, the testimony that Mrs. Stokes had been twice at the home of W. L. Pepperman in Berlin, Conn. She had attended week-end parties there in 1914 or 1915. It was testified that Mrs. Stokes posed as "Mrs. Wynn" on those occasions was the statement of Stokes' attorneys.

Through this damning evidence as she has sat through weeks of the same filth, Mrs. Stokes remained calm. Close observers, however, might have noticed a triumphant little smile trying to break through the corners of her mouth.

Then came Mrs. Pell's turn. Questioned by Mrs. Stokes' counsel she told the jury that before her marriage to the wealthy broker, Howard Pell, in 1915, she was Mrs. Margaret E. Wynn.

She visited Pepperman's home twice in 1914 or 1915 and also knew Mrs. Daisey Hays, the woman with whom Mrs. Stokes was supposed to have ridden from the Pepperman place on one occasion, she also said.

Her testimony finished, Mrs. Pell remained in the witness chair while her remarkable resemblance to Mrs. Stokes was analyzed. Jurors were startled as they compared the titan hair peeping out from under her hat with the neat turban of Mrs. Stokes.

Asked why she testified she said: "I was simply wanted to see another woman receive justice."

New York—Edgar T. Wallace, co-respondent in the trial of the divorce suit instituted by W. L. Stokes, taking the stand today, denied that the photograph of a woman seen in his rooms was that of Mrs. Ellen Elwood Stokes.

He told the court the picture was that of a friend, whose name he did not care to disclose. Wallace also testified that he never had asked Joseph A. Thornton, who had been in the apartment he once had occupied, to call any taxis for him for women.

5 SAILORS PERISH IN SINKING OF U. S. SUBMARINE

MEN GO DOWN WITH DIVER IN EARLY MORNING DISASTER. COLLISION, CAUSE

Navy Department Awaits Official Report of Panama Canal Mishap.

Washington—The navy department today had received no official report on the sinking of the submarine O-5 in collision with the steamer Abanango, at the Atlantic entrance of the Panama canal, since that of yesterday.

The message to the department yesterday said the submarine had been sunk early in the day, and that five men had gone down with the vessel.

There had been no official confirmation of the reported loss of three men in press dispatches which said six others were missing and that efforts were being made to have them by raising the submarine.

In the absence of any further official report, naval officers were unable to say what might have caused the collision. It was supposed, however, that unusual weather conditions or misunderstanding of navigation signals had led to the accident.

The sinking of O-5, a new class of submarine, was the first of its kind since the sinking of the O-1 in 1918.

"Taking the Blue Sky Out of Style"

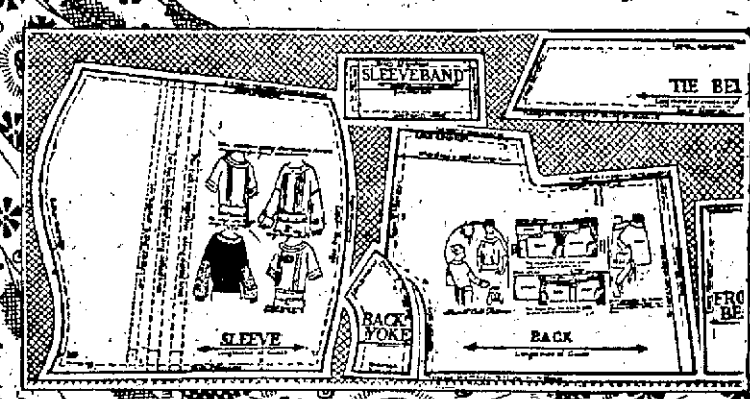

Shop for Style

—but don't pay a tax on it! Style is something apart from cost—as more and more women are learning. A high price does not improve a commonplace style. A low price does not depreciate an admirable style. It is not how much you spend, but how wisely you choose, that means surety in Style. In shopping for Style, you can easily pay much more than our prices and get much less.

The glamour of high prices could add nothing to the appeal of the styles at this store.
Nor do our moderate prices subtract any-

COMMUNITY PAYS HONOR TO PASTOR

Half-Dozen Organizations Join in Tribute to Rev. R. G. Pierson.

People from every church and representatives of practically all organizations in the city completely filled the First Baptist church auditorium Sunday afternoon for a farewell meeting for the Rev. Raymond G. Pierson, who, with his family, left at 10 o'clock today for his home and pastorate at Dorchester, Penn.

In the morning he had preached to a full church the final farewell message after a pastorate of seven years. The evening service was held at the church and was presided over by Roger C. Cunningham, one of the trustees of the church and a member of the Kiwanis club of which Mr. Pierson is also a member. Musical numbers were by the Kiwanis club quartet, Dr. Thomas J. Snodgrass, Dr. Stewart P. Leach, the Arthur Schuchert and David Drummond and by Mrs. M. A. Macmullen and J. A. Olsen. Mr. Olsen sang a solo. The organ prelude was by Mrs. A. A. Pierson.

Praised as Good Citizen. Oscar Nelson, manager of the Chamber of Commerce, paid tribute to Mr. Pierson as a citizen and one of the many public movements in which the Baptist pastor had participated, his readiness to co-operate with the chamber of commerce and his specifications of a good citizen who was an asset to his community. Joseph A. Steiner, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., spoke of the work done by Mr. Pierson in his community. George Waterman paid a tribute to the Odd Fellows to a fellow member in the many calls that had been made by Mr. Pierson and his ready response.

County Judge C. L. Fifield spoke of the organization of the Rotary clubs and the reason for existence of the club was the same nature. The desire of mankind for fellowship and friendship was at the bottom of it and out of this had grown a great number of organizations, he said. If this spirit could be established in all the world there would be no place for war and peace on earth, good will toward men would be established.

Kiwanians Honor Him. Following this theme, Leo Bennett, member of Kiwanis who spoke for that organization of which Mr. Pierson was a charter member and recently was lieutenant governor of the Wisconsin and Upper Peninsula district, spoke of Mr. Pierson as a good minister but a better man.

"He's a regular guy," said Mr. Bennett, and in his work for the underprivileged child and in a hundred ways he has contributed to the success of the club.

A. E. Matheson dwelt on the things which were foundation stones of the Rotary club, the Masonic lodge, of which the Rev. Mr. Pierson is a member, a belief in God, the presence of the Bible, the spirit of tolerance, the helplessness of humanity, a membership with the common people, and other points. These, he said, Mr. Pierson had exemplified and typified in his life and in his membership.

Melrose Speaks for Clergy. J. C. Hanchett spoke for the Baptist church and expressed the regrets of the congregation at the leaving. The Rev. J. A. Melrose told of all the great tasks which were the responsibility of Mr. Pierson, from Christ to all the world, said. The minister was not perhaps so important as was the man but the greater the minister the greater the man. In a word, he said, Mr. Pierson was a man who had been no time when there was not the finest cooperation by Mr. Pierson. That he would be missed in Janesville was certain. He had been a great force for a better citizenship here, day after day, he said.

At the close of the service, the Rev. Mr. Pierson spoke briefly and feelingly of leaving the city and his long and pleasant associations here. He was first of all a minister, he said. He carried the news of Him to the people, he declared. He talked of the other relations which a minister must have in a community in respect to many activities. He said that a minister should carry Christ into his daily life, into his vote and every manifestation. There was more to do for the children of the world, he said, than was one of the biggest elements in a minister's life—to lead children to a higher and better life.

Pierson and two sons, who were seated in front, were called to the platform just before the closing hymn sung by the audience, led by Dr. Snodgrass.

The service at 11 a. m. was the last meeting of Mr. Pierson with the large family which composes the congregation of the First Baptist church of Janesville, of which Mr. Pierson has headed the past seven years. Ten children and adults were baptized and the Lord's supper celebrated.

Mr. Pierson did not preach a sermon. He talked of his relationships during the seven years and expressed his appreciation for their loyalty, their patience, love and their many kindnesses both to him and his family.

"During these seven years I have tried to preach Christ, to lift Him up, to make Him real," said Mr. Pierson. "I have tried to present Him so He would be attractive, that you would love Him the more, follow Him closer and know Him better. I have tried to minister to you in spirit. I have been among you as one that serves."

Work With Young People. The pastor spoke of his work with the young people, whom he declared are the biggest asset of the church for "only as we develop that asset, only as we nurture them, as we train them, will Christ's church have a future."

future prosperity of the church and people," he said. "Under God may you prosper as never before. You have done a good work, but it is not finished. Carry on! Lift up the Christ. Serve men. Be perfect. Your days shall become perfect. Become perfect in character. Grow and expand! Do not remain as children in your spiritual life. Do not be dummies. Be spiritual giants. Keep Christ before you as the pattern."

The pastor urged them to have courage and sacred lives. We have passed through experiences together that have strengthened and purified us. To those who have stood loyally with me in the deepest appreciation to those who have hindered there is only love and forgiveness. My dearest prayer and heartfelt wish is that you will carry your new ways thank God for the privilege of working with such a noble group of Christian people known as the First Baptist church of Janesville."

The Padlock Injunction Law.

The Volstead law carries a clause in which there is given the right to close the place for one year. It also provides that the owner may however give bond in a satisfactory amount that the place shall not be used for the violation of the liquor law. The clause is as follows:

"Any room, house, building, boat, vehicle, structure or place where intoxicating liquor is manufactured, sold, kept or bartered in violation of this title, and all intoxicating liquor and property kept, and used in maintaining the same, is hereby declared to be a common nuisance."

And upon judgment of the court ordering such nuisance to be abated, the court may order that the room, house, building, structure, boat, vehicle, or place, shall not be occupied or used for one year thereafter; but the court may, in its discretion, permit it to be occupied or used, if the owner, lessee, tenant or occupant thereof shall give bond with sufficient surety and conditioned that intoxicating liquor will not thereafter be manufactured, sold, bartered, kept or otherwise disposed of therein or thereon, and that he will pay all fines, costs and damages that may be assessed for any violations of this title upon said property."

It is under this act that the proceedings are being taken against one of the South Janesville places. The disclosures of Friday, in which two violators of the law plead guilty and paid a cash fine of $1,000 each, should appear to be of such a conclusive character that the building in which the violations took place, ought to be declared a nuisance and closed for the year. The admissions made are certainly not at all complimentary to the official actions in the last year, since it was freely admitted that the sale of moonshine had been going on constantly for a long time. South Janesville can well exist without this disgraceful place and if the owner will not see that his property is kept free from pollution by the infamous, then the authorities, fully armed with statute, should get after it with the nuisance clause. The only way to purify South Janesville is to clean it up, close it up and keep it closed. If it draws such cattle as have been operating these law violating and law defying places for the last several years, and only that class, then it might well be continued as a nuisance indefinitely. You cannot change the leopard's spots by reading tracts to him.

Democratic Praise for Kellogg.

Apparently the New York World, the bible of the democracy, does not agree with some of its narrow political brethren in the criticism of the president's appointment of Frank B. Kellogg as ambassador to Britain. The World says:

Mr. Kellogg will fill the post at London with dignity and distinction. When the name of Elihu Root was first mentioned there was general approval, but for reasons of health he was forced to decline the appointment. President Coolidge is fortunate in his later choice, for aside from his standing as a member of the Republican Party, Mr. Kellogg on entering upon his new duties is assured of public respect. That through a shift of the political weather-cock in his own state he was cast aside in no way lessens his qualifications for foreign service. In London he will be an eminently fit representative of his country, to whom the people both of the United States and Great Britain may look with confidence to uphold the high traditions of the past.

It must not be overlooked that Mr. Kellogg never was a member of the "reactionary" or ultra-conservative wing of the party. Neither was he of the type which backs nonpartisan leagues and socialism, theoretic of otherwise.

Making Billions Out of Wage Earners.

Here is one way the German industrialists have made millions. During the Ruhr occupation and in the effort of Germany to go bankrupt herself that there could be no reparation payments. The manufacturers and others owning and operating mines and mills, have been permitted by the government to issue their own money, to print enormous millions of paper in their own offices and pay the laborers in that currency. By so doing the mills and mines have produced great quantities of salable articles and all that has been exported has been paid for in gold. The workmen have received the paper money, now worthless, in payment of wages. The opportunity for profiting by millions of dollars in actual gold has made billionaires of several of the industrial king and has contributed to the present disastrous and perilous condition in Germany where men and women and children are still being exploited amid starvation and hunger. It is the worst example of ruthless abandonment of a people to the wolfish maw of the unscrupulous who have known in modern times.

We await with complaisance the eventual snow-fall.

The ultimate ultimate is found in Eugene V. Debs statement that Henry Ford would not make a good president because he, Ford, "knows nothing outside of the automobile business." Also the soul of Debs is shocked at the possibilities of what Mr. Ford might do in the White House.

It might be well for the Americans who are so horrified at the possible convulsions of the French at the establishment of a Rhineland republic, to recall what happened at Panama at

Small Banks Are Not Reservists

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

Washington—A joint congressional committee, headed by Louis T. McFadden, chairman of the house committee on banking and currency, is endeavoring to ascertain if possible, why small banks and trust companies decline to join the federal reserve system of banking which was set up in 1913 by the federal government. Failure of the banks of the country to flock to this system has been a source of disappointment to many of its sponsors and much controversy rages around the reasons for their aloofness.

When the federal reserve act was passed it provided that national banks must become members of the system. State chartered banks could come in at their option. The results were quite astonishing to those who regarded the new banking system as the final in the world. A situation was presented which might be compared to one in which a person had arranged what he believed would be a very fine party and then discovered that not only did many of the invited guests fail to come but some of those who, out of duty ordinarily could be counted on, found excuses to stay away.

The state chartered banks which were invited did not make any wild rush to get into the system. Even some of the national banks which, under the law, were compelled to become members, gave up their national charters and took state charters so they could remain outside.

One of the reasons which is believed to explain this conduct both as to the reluctant invited banks and as to the fugitive ones is that the system is not fully understood nor its advantages comprehended. One of the objects of the congressional joint committee which is making a tour of the middle west is to carry to the country bankers a fuller knowledge of what the federal reserve system can do for a member bank.

A preliminary hearing has been held at Washington before the committee's first interview with testimony on the subject adduced. The outstanding reason why the small state chartered banks do not enter the system seems to be that, as affairs now stand, they can get the advantages of membership without bearing any of the responsibilities.

The federal reserve system, briefly, is a banking system under government auspices, which provides a reservoir of reserve credit for the use of banks in time of stress. The system is credited with having saved the old-fashioned financial panic a thing of the past. When a member bank has such pressing demands for loans from its customers that its money is exhausted, it takes the notes given it by borrowers to its federal reserve bank and that institution agrees to take this security and advance federal reserve notes which are a type of circulating currency. In 1920 when the farmers were feeling the pinch of falling prices, millions upon millions were advanced to them through the federal reserve system.

Before the advent of this system, every small bank in the country had a big city correspondent. This correspondent was a bank in a large city and usually was a national bank. When the small bank had lent all its available funds to borrowers, it borrowed from its correspondent in order to keep on lending and meeting the demands of the local communities. Some big city banks had as many as two or three thousand small banks depending upon them. One of the reasons why money shortages and financial panics occurred was that a time would come when even the big city correspondent would have no more money. The federal reserve system remedied this. With the federal reserve banks in existence the big city bank now can go to its federal reserve bank and borrow on the notes it has taken from its small town country correspondents.

As matters now stand, the small state bank in the country borrows from the big city bank and the big city bank borrows from the federal reserve bank. It is because of the existence of the federal reserve bank that almost unlimited credit can be given by the big city bank to the small country bank. Therefore, the little bank is getting indirectly the benefit of the federal reserve bank credit but does not have to bear any share of the burden of being a member bank.

In other words, the small bank is getting bootleg credit. If it were a member bank and had put up its fair share of capital to help make the reservoir of capital of the federal reserve bank, it could go there direct when in need of funds. Not being a member it must deal indirectly through its big city correspondent bank.

Another important reason why the small state chartered bank stays out is that when it becomes a member it must put a part of its funds in a pool at the federal reserve bank. On this money, known as reserve deposits, it receives no interest. If it carries such deposits in a big city bank, that bank pays it interest. The committee has been urged by small bankers to have congress change the law so that interest may be paid.

As the law stands, the limit on dividends which may be received by the member bank from its portion of the capital of the federal reserve bank is 6 per cent. All over this amount is paid to the government. No federal reserve bank possibly can be a profiteer because, after the six per cent point in earnings is reached, all further earnings go to Uncle Sam. It has been suggested that many small banks would join the system if congress would change the law so they could get bigger profits on their stock in the federal reserve bank.

Of course many of the state chartered banks did come into the system but most of them were the larger banks located in big cities. One reason for the inquiry being made by the congressional committee is that there has been much complaint in the last year or two from farmers who have declared they could not get adequate credit. It was believed in some quarters that one strong reason for this was that the state chartered banks located in small towns and rural districts were not members of the system and therefore were not equipped to give the farmers as good service as otherwise they could give. Therefore, the inquiry was made to discover why the small banks did not come in as they will be in better shape to lend to the farmers.

The time we were negotiating for the canal rights and Colombia was holding us up. If we did not arrange the rebellion of Panama and see that the new republic was at once recognized as a separate state, we do not remember history correctly. It was quite on the par with what is happening now along the trail of the Ruhr.

Governor Blaine does not care to confer with Prohibition Agent Perry of the federal service on law enforcement. Perhaps he would prefer to confer with the Association for the Repeal of the 18th Amendment.

There are 677,840 people in New York City who attend the theaters of that city daily, 184 theaters and 578 movie houses cater to this enormous theater population. What influence the theaters have on almost a million people a day may be conjectured. It is therefore perfectly plain why interest in the quality and kind of shows we present to the people is great, and no one should overlook the individual responsibility in maintaining a higher standard.

The Oklahoma legislature is going slow. It does not mean to miss any crimes in the calendar which may be booked onto Gov. Wallon.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

THOUGHTS OF HIS GOING TO SCHOOL.
Time takes his toll in various ways
And every man has his portion paid;
And every man must leave behind
Sign posts to prove that he has known
The burdens of the older crowd.
That touch of care, this duty stern,
And traveled on, new tasks to learn,
Though young of heart he seems to be,
The stamp of Time is plain to see.

Take us today, a youthful pair
Who'd pass for young folks anywhere;
Our backs are straight, our muscles strong,
We fairly dance by way of song.
Our laughter still is just as gay
As 'twas upon our wedding day,
And yet, somehow, we've come to feel
That age is very close and real.
The world at large we don't fool,
We have a son who goes to school!

This sign post, written first with tears,
Now stands to mark the passing years.
What though we sham young strangers smile,
And practice little tricks of guile,
To show the world we still are young,
We cannot check Time's tell-tale tongue.
No proud deception can detract
From the sure witness to the fact.
Our age is known by way of song,
We have a son who goes to school!

Who's Who Today

MAJ. GEN. JOHN F. O'RYAN

As general counsel for the special senate committee investigating the conduct of the veteran's bureau under Col. Charles R. Forbes' regime, Major General O'Ryan is directing work of unearthing the facts connected with the alleged mismanagement and waste connected with the bureau. O'Ryan, who retired from active service in the U. S. army a few months ago, was the outstanding figure of the national guard during the World War. Among national guard generals he was distinguished as the only one who retained command of his unit from the beginning to the end of the war. He was the only national guard general who retained the rank of major general after the war. He took the Twenty-seventh, "New York's Own," to Camp Wadsworth, Spangarburg, S. C., trained it and led it overseas in the spring of 1918. The division was sent to the British front and helped to break the Hindenburg line in the last great offensive. While he is best known as a soldier, he has had wide experience as a lawyer.

HAY FEVER RESORTS

Now that the season is over, it is safe to mention some of the places where, take it from the home folks or the state health authorities, hay fever sufferers generally find relief.

Alabama—Towns along Mobile bay are resorts for people having asthma. The resort—State board of health reports: "Yes, we have no hay fever resorts."

Arkansas—Eureka Springs, Heber Springs, Sylvan Springs and Winslow, in the Ozarks.
California—Santa Cruz, Del Monte, Santa Barbara, Coronado, on the coast; Lake Tahoe in the Sierras.
Colorado—Silver Plume and other mountains having an altitude exceeding 7,000 feet.

Connecticut—The Litchfield Hills, New London.
Florida—Partial relief along southern coast.
Georgia—Brasstown, Bald Mountain, Louisiana—Covington, Abita Springs and Magnolia afford relief from the spring type of hay fever.

Maine—Rangely, Lakes, Kineo, Moosehead lake.
Michigan—Northwestern part, comparatively free.
Minnesota—Duluth.

New Mexico—Cloudcroft, Whitcomb Springs, Albuquerque, Valley Rancho, Gilettia, Jemez Springs, Sulphur Springs, El Porvenir and East Las Vegas.

New York—Adirondacks, Thousand Island Park, Big Moose, Old Forge, Fulton chain of lakes.
North Carolina—Eagle's Nest, Glen Ayre, Black Dome, Mount Gibbs, Hall's, Black Mt., Mitchell, in Black mountain, Double Springs, Richland, Balsam and Jones knots in Balsam range, Mt. Buckley, Clinegrave's Drive, Mt. Love and Alexander, in the Smoky mountains.

North Dakota—Devil's Lake.
Pennsylvania—Eaglesmere, the Pocono mountains, hills around Bradford, mountains around Mont Alto and Caledonia.
South Carolina—Caesar's Head, Greenville county.

South Dakota—Hot Springs.
Tennessee—Rome mountain, altitude 6,211 feet.
Utah—Brighton, Ogden, canyon trails.

Virginia—Terra Alta, Marlinton and Webster Springs, favorable, but altitude (2,500 feet) not enough to afford complete relief.
Wisconsin—Two Rivers, because of the location on peninsula extending seven miles into Lake Michigan. States not mentioned in the list either have no hay fever resorts or, if they claim such places, the relief afforded is so problematic that I omit them as resorts.

Arctic—Travel and relief from hay fever is more or less a gamble until the victim has tried it for himself. Of course, it all depends on getting away from the particular pollen which may be responsible in the given case. Sometimes the simplest way to do this is to visit a large city, remain in the heart of it, where no weeds flourish unless parched in some distant lot. A sea voyage temporarily leaves the pollen far behind, or a great lakes voyage, or a sojourn in a mountain resort at considerable altitude, or the heavy rain, which washes the pollen out of the air and brings relief for days.

If one can afford to travel or live away from home and can't persuade the rain not to come, my best bet would be the use of warm boracic acid solution (teaspoonful to pint of boiled water) as a nasal spray and a gargle, three or four times daily, and a good dose of calcium chloride or calcium lactate internally three times a day after meals throughout the season. A good dose is half a teaspoonful of either the chloride or the lactate, well dissolved in a glassful of water. If this does not disturb the stomach, it often proves a valuable remedy.

People who really suffer seasonal hay fever ought to be tested with pollen extracts, to determine what is responsible, and then immunized against the responsible pollen before the season starts. This any good doctor can do.

Q. What is the Morrill Land Act?
A. The Morrill Land Act was introduced in congress by Justin Smith Morrill, an American legislator and political leader. The act provided for the establishment through the federal land grant system of colleges throughout the country, primarily for the teaching of agriculture and the mechanical arts, though other subjects were not excluded.

The bill was passed by congress and vetoed by President Buchanan, again introduced and became a law under President Lincoln, 1862. It was amended in 1890 by the act called the second Morrill Act.

Q. Please give a description of the Giant's Causeway in Ireland.
A. W. C. A. According to legend the Giant's Causeway was the beginning of a road to be constructed by giants, from Ireland to Scotland. It projects from the north coast of Antrim, Ireland, into the North Channel, seven miles. It consists of 40,000 vertical, closely fitting columns of basalt rock, varying from 15 to 18 inches, and is 1,200 feet in length. The columns are of various shapes and sizes, some being as large as a man's arm, and some as small as a child's finger.

The "wishing chair," with two arms and a back, and the "lady's lap" are on the middle causeway. At the end of the causeway is the "giant's well," to the right, the "giant's chair." An electric tramway now connects the town of Portrush with the causeway.

Q. How are the paper water buckets made that are used by railroads?
A. These buckets are usually made from wood bark reduced to a pulp mixed with a suitable binder which is a water-resistant glue and molded to proper shape. Such buckets are also sometimes made from paper mache which is composed of old papers macerated to pulp and molded in the manner described.

Q. How many public libraries are there in America?
A. The American Library Directory lists about 3,000 public and Chinese libraries. The list includes libraries in cities of 1,000 population and over.

LYDD GEORGE ON OLD BATTLEFIELDS

Military Leaders of Civil War Days Praised by Noted Briton.

Richmond, Va.—Continuing his tour of Virginia battle fields, began yesterday with a visit to Gettysburg and the scene of the Wilderness fighting. David Lloyd George set out from Richmond early today to view the scene of operations during the former Confederate capital, first turning his attention to the historic locality of the seven days' struggle in the summer of 1862.

The former British premier was attended on his tour today by Rear Admiral C. T. Grayson of Washington, a committee of local citizens.

Dismissing a keen interest in the military tactics of Lee and Jackson, the war time leader, accompanied by Dame Margaret and Miss Megan, in his inspection yesterday, agreed with his guides that the world had developed no military commander like either of those southern leaders.

Commenting on the personalities of the outstanding war chiefs of the conflict between the states and the recent world struggle, Mr. Lloyd George said:

"I think the men most like those two (Lee and Jackson) were Foch and Allenby. There was something about Allenby that very definitely suggested Jackson."

Mr. Lloyd George attended divine services in the old Episcopal church in Fredericksburg, where Mary Washington, mother of George Washington, was worshipped and where lie the remains of many of those prominent in colonial life.

Keating Asks for New Trial

Convinced by a jury on a liquor count in municipal court last week, and due to be sentenced Monday by Judge H. L. Mayfield, William Keating filed a petition for a new trial, asking that the jury's verdict be set aside on the grounds that the incompetent testimony of the state was admitted against objection, and that the case was tried on the theory that a former conviction was a mitigative factor in the prosecution.

The petition was filed by Keating's attorney, E. H. Ryan, and Judge Mayfield deferred the passing of sentence until 9 a. m., Tuesday.

Whaley to Talk to Local Lions

Vilas Whaley, Racine, state commander of the American legion, who speaks at the American legion meeting here Tuesday, will be a guest of the Lions club at the weekly luncheon Wednesday noon at the Grand Hotel. Mr. Whaley is a former member of the Legion Americanization committee. His address will be on this subject.

Secretary Otto Bach announces all members are expected to bring a guest.

Special invitations have been extended to the heads of the G. A. R., Spanish War veterans and American legion. Capt. Perle Grisham of the Tank Corps and Past State Commander James P. Curle of the G. A. R. will be present.

ALL VETERANS OF WORLD WAR ASKED TO ATTEND BANQUET

Old Glory is waving Monday for the former service men of the world war. The annual reunion, banquet and lecture, the business streets were decked out Monday morning by the city in honor to the local American legion.

"Somewhere" in Janesville, the soldiers, sailors and marines of the great war will dine Tuesday. They will gather at Moose hall at 7 p. m., gather on the "chow line" and follow the leader to an "unknown place." The 100-piece high school band will lead the procession through the center of the city.

A special appeal is made Monday by the committee to all former service men of the city, whether legionnaires or not, to attend. It is believed there are a number such working in the manufacturing plants of the state.

Commander Vilas Whaley, former member of the Americanization committee of the national legion, will be here. He will be the principal speaker. He will speak at the Lions den Wednesday noon.

That long-winded oration that is being advertised is a stunt being worked up by Grisham, W. W. Brown of the high school.

AT THE THEATRES

AT THE REVERLY

Circumstances "The Living Truth" points to Bill O'Hara, the nobody Irishman, as the murderer of his fellow inmate Sam Claborn, but just as the angry mob is about to lynch the hero, Sam's mother produces a note which is a confession of suicide, left by Sam. General O'Malley is the hero, who assumes charge of his foster-father's falling newspaper and after getting out all the story of which he had intended to take, but which becomes a grim reality, finds success.

Marjorie Day is Sue, the daughter of the town politician, who is killed because of his exposing crime in the city and wishes his daughter to marry Sam Claborn, Sam, throughout the picture, gets into all sorts of trouble, and after becoming addicted to drugs, shoots himself. Neal Boory makes an admirable boss of the town, and Claire McDowell plays the mother part for many of the picture.

A new feature, "Tony Sarg's Almanac" was presented. The Sara marionettes have been presented in nearby cities frequently.

WALTON MAY TOUR FOR CHAUTAUQU

Oldham City, N. M.—Preparations for the opening Thursday of the impeachment trial of Governor C. Walton went forward today behind closed doors.

With the house investigation complete, virtually the sole activity in connection with the impeachment action centering on the conference of executive and of the house board of managers, who will prosecute the case.

It was indicated that the house managers were preparing to combat the expected demerit of the governor.

Coinciding with the opening of the week in which the final attempt to oust the governor comes the report that Governor Walton had been approached about a Chautauqu lecture contract. Although the governor would make no comment his friends intimated that he was considering such a proposition. It was pointed out that in case he is removed from office he may accept the offer, but only on that condition.

STRAWBERRIES RIPEN IN LOCAL GARDEN

If Mrs. M. E. Spooner, 253 South Franklin street, hadn't looked at the calendar she would have had reason to believe on Tuesday night garden berries were ripe. She went into her garden Monday and picked a dish of strawberries.

They were as good as those she had in the spring. Mrs. Spooner declared, blossoms are full and green berries abundant, which indicate the crop will be good. Spooner picked berries on Armistice day.

Court Vault Is Shaken by Blast

One side was blown out of the earthenware jug.
